There are 2 major flaws with Yashik preventing it from being fun.

The first, the hit boxes for the spikes. They are slightly larger than the actual image so you often feel like you were safe but nope start that level again.

The second problem is you can't change the key bindings. So you're stuck moving the character with A and D to move left and right, space to jump and then F to put down the blocks and E to go through the door. It might not sound so bad but since you need to put the blocks down at very specific times you have your hands squashed together in this awkward way.
